

(whistling)

- Like it?

- You sure got your figure back fast!

- Yeah, it's all the exercise washing diapers.

- You still washing diapers? (baby crying)

- Sally, Teddy's only five months old.

Sally: You really ought to change to these.

Teddy's Mom: Pampers?

Sally: Mm-hmm, you don't wash them, you use them only once.

- Well I like that, but how 'bout my baby?

- Oh, Pampers keep Patty drier than diapers.

- Drier than diapers? How can that be?

Narrator: Here's how. When a cloth diaper gets wet, it stays wet, inside and out. But moisture goes through Pampers' Stay-Dry lining, and is trapped in absorbent layers below. Inside, next to baby, the lining stays drier, so baby stays drier. Outside, Pampers are waterproof, you don't need plastic pants. (baby laughing)

- Here, hold Teddy.

- Huh?

- Gotta get dressed, can't go out shopping in a bathing suit. (Sally chuckling)

Narrator: Pampers, in three sizes, newborn, daytime, overnight.
