

- Albert, how are you feeling?

- Worse.

- Aw, well I went shopping, stopped in at the bank, oh that Chemical New York.

- Oh, what they do today? Serve tea and cookies?

- No, just smiles. You know, some banks keep the smiles in the vault with the money, but at Chemical New York, everybody smiles. I tell you it's our hometown bank all over again.

- I could have been a hometown banker.

- But it's more than a hometown bank, it's a big... Albert. Dear? Albert? Oh, thought you were delirious.

- You know I could have been a great hometown banker.

- Oh but dear, Chemical New York is more than just a hometown bank. It's a bank serving big corporations. Makes the small depositor feel safe. Albert? Dreaming again?

Voiceover: You like it because it's hometown and a big New York bank. There's no place like Chemical New York the bank with the hometown touch.
