

Interviewer: Did your attitude about America change while you were in Guantanamo and since then?

Interpreter: About American people, it has not changed at all, but toward American government, yes, toward their policies and stuff.

Interviewer: And what would you like America to do for you?

Interpreter: All this unfairness still continuing, we still have people for past seven years continuing to stay in Guantanamo Bay right now, and their families are being pressured by the Chinese police, and because of what the US government did, giving their information to the Chinese government and stuff. This question should not be asked from us, this question should be asked from American people, from United States. Any smart people can figure out the answer to that.
