

(film static crackling)

- And there, on the same aircraft was Fabersham out to get the same American contracts I was after. Time was of the essence. (men concurring) But, I have discovered a super new way to travel called Fly Avis Nonstop.

- Avis the rent-a-car people?

- Right, you see, before boarding, I stopped at the Avis counter where they filled in my Fly Avis rental form and I was off.

- Huh?

- Now, here is the aircraft.

- The time machine.

- Here is the Avis counter, here the Avis parking area and here, is yours truly. (laughing) Now, upon landing, I went directly from the aircraft, past the Avis counter to the parking area, where the Avis agent escorted me to my marvelous new Dodge and I was off in a flash. Leaving Fabersham still at his rent-a-car counter.

- Oh, Careful. By the time he got his rental, I was already lunching with the president, contract signed.

Man: Well done.

- Thank you, but you know, those Americans still drive on the wrong side of the road.

- They do.

- Do they?

Narrator: Fly Avis Nonstop in the San Francisco and Los Angeles commuter airports.
