

(erasing chalkboard) (writing on chalkboard)

- The positive thing that comes out of Guantanamo, I guess is, is that, you know, you go through hardship and then you realize for me it's been Right now, I look I look at the world in a different way. I really it's like, it's like the veil has been lifted off the world. And what I see, you know what the world is, it is about, it is pain. It is suffering. Guantanamo is the real face of of the world and life. That's, that's how I see it. Coming back, that veil has been placed back and I'm expected to like accept society as though, you know things like Guantanamo Bay aren't happening or you know, even worse. But I can't do that because I've seen beyond the veil.