

- Here's the number where we'll be, Mrs. Cook. I, oh, I'm sorry.

- First time outing?

- Oh, how'd you know?

- Lucky guess. Now you and Mr. Bean relax, go out and have fun. Just point me to the diapers.

- Oh, in the baby's room in the box.

- A box? Pampers?

- Sure, Pampers. When you change her, just get rid of it.

- You didn't need to get special diapers just for tonight.

- Oh, but I use Pampers all the time. They keep Jenny drier.

- Drier than diapers?

- Uh-huh.

- How?

Narrator: Here's how. When a cloth diaper gets wet, it stays wet, inside and out. But moisture goes through Pampers stay-dry lining and is trapped in absorbent layers below. Inside, next to baby, the lining stays drier, so baby stays drier. Outside, Pampers are waterproof. You don't need plastic pants.

- Your mommy's pretty smart for a nervous Nell.

- Me, nervous? (Mrs. Cook laughs)

Narrator: Pampers, for drier, happier babies.
