

(car revving)

- Hi, Fred. Charlie, say, listen, I'm down by the station and my batteries clocked out on me. And I think maybe I'll need a boost or something.

- Gee, Charlie, it's late. Ruth will be home from the movie soon. Isn't Bob around?

- Bob said, "You better look."

- Okay. Charlie, I'll be right there. (phone clanks)

- He's coming. He's coming! (crowd chattering) Can you change the lights off everyone?

- Sorry about this, Fred.

Narrator: For over 70 years now, we at Texaco have been working to keep your trust.

- Surprise!

Narrator: A lot of our friends have become our customers. And a lot of our customers have become my friends. The energy shortage is causing us problems today but we've been working to own your trust for a long time. We're not about to lose it now.

- Good night, Charlie.

- Fred? Fred? (car engine stalling) Fred!
