

- I was taken to clinic and the dentist came. And then they told me (indistinct). "Yeah, you have pain," then I showed this. And then he said, "Here, we don't have any choice. You go back there or you have to let us to pull out." No medicine, nothing. So because of pain, I'm gonna go show patient, and I told them, "Okay." And they made my tooth and around the gum numb, then...

Interviewer: Pulled it?

- Pulled out.

- But actually, they did it wrong. And I showed them my-(speaking foreign language)

- Last one.

- Last one. But they didn't pull out, the next they pulled out. I did not feel after, because they made really, really strong numb. When I came to cell after one day or two days, then my (indistinct), he told me which tooth he pulled out. Then I told him, "The last one." "Show me." Then I opened my mouth and he said, "No, last one is okay." He sent me beside, (interviewee laughs) I moved my tongue, it was next, not last one. I was so upset. After two days, a nurse came. (indistinct) I explained everything. And the dentist, his senta- His-

- Assistant.

- Assistant, yeah. I said, "Last one. I told you last one, but you pulled out second one," this and that. "Okay, I'm sorry. I was confused." This and that. So what can I do? I mean, I was a detainee. Chained, imprisoned in a small cell. So I show patience.
