

- Well, you take Uncle George now, he's in the shoe business. For 10 years he was a mailman. So he's given me his hard life story.

- Doris Arkelow; $50 out of checking.

- Into savings. You're getting rich, Doris!

Frank: Did he make elf shoes or regular shoes?

- No, regular, regular.

Frank: Oh. It's not the bells on them or anything?

- No, no.

- Thirty-five dollars.

- Frank Corey, thirty-five dollars. Atta go Frank, you're all right.

Narrator: Chemical New York announces Check'n'Save, the service that automatically - every month - transfers money from your checking account to your savings account, so it can earn our full interest rate. Just tell us two things - How much you want to save each month, and which day of the month you'd like it transferred. We do all the legwork. Check'n'Save at Chemical New York. All hundred and forty one offices. New York; when needs are financial, the reaction is chemical.

- Oh, my wife says this is the best thing I ever did since I left Santa Claus.

- Yeah? Goodnight, Pop.

- See ya, Pop.

- Goodnight, boys. Give my love to the little women.

- What did he mean by that?
