

Mother-In-Law: What about Pam? You can tell your mother, Harold.

- What Mom?

- Her job, is it working out?

- Great, Mother. Great.

- She's still able to take care of you?

Husband: She does fine, Mom, really.

- Well, forgive me for asking, but her job and this apartment, it's so much take care of.

Mother-In-Law: Maybe a maid would help out.

Husband: She can handle it, Mom. Pam's a genius.

- I could come over and help out with the laundry, no trouble. Is that a new shirt?

- No, Pam washed it. She used this.

- Salvo? It sure seems to do a good job.

Mother-In-Law: And tablets? Looks easy.

- Pam says it makes life a little simpler.

- Salvo. Hmm.

- Relax, Mom. No one takes better care of her husband.

- Oh, are you two talking about me?

Narrator: Simple, sure, Salvo Tablets. Real help for the working woman.
