

- Will you ask your daughter, Charlie, to pass the sugar?

- Oh, Jack.

Announcer: The generation gap.

- What are you reading, the history of beads?

Announcer: It happens in the best of families.

- I see you got an A minus in English this term. You got an A plus last term.

- You didn't help me with my homework last term.

Announcer: And the gap grows wider every day, until (knives clanging) our little tub brings them together. Soft Chiffon, the safflower oil margarine. So delicious, it bridges the gap with flavor.

- Gee, Dad, you dig Chiffon?

- Sure. I do it like this.

- And if you're counting calories, here's Diet Chiffon, the skinny spread that doesn't taste skinny.